

Dear Colleague

There has been increased interest from general practice in developing sexual health services so I have put together this programme to help practices move forward and prepare for the commissioning and development of their services. It will also be useful if you are involved in practice-based commissioning.

I recently wrote a series of articles which were published in the Advanced Practice section of Practice Nurse magazine. I have also contributed to an introductory chapter of a revised sexual health in primary care publication, due to be published in the autumn of 2010.

It occurred to me that practice nurses and others (GPs, managers) might appreciate a series of workshops to build on the information in these articles, relate them to their current practice, help them to prepare for commissioning, and plan for service improvements.

With a background in practice management and the NHS (quality, commissioning, primary care development) I have worked as a Consultant for 11 years, much of that time working at a strategic level with primary care trusts and local authorities on teenage pregnancy and sexual health. Recently, I have worked for a PCT on a short term contract, on the commissioning of teenage pregnancy and sexual health services.

Each workshop has a solution-focused approach and draws from wide-ranging evidence and good practice. This is not a clinical programme but focuses on the framework needed to support clinical practice. Information on clinical courses will be made available.

I hope you'll find something of interest to you in the programme and look forward to meeting you at one of our workshops around the country.
